

The World

Published by the Press Publishing Company.

MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 2.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE EVENING WORLD.
(Including Postage.)
PER MONTH.....$0.05
PER YEAR.....$0.50

VOL. 30.....NO. 10,240

Entered as the Post-Office at New York as second-class matter.

52 BRANCH OFFICES:
WORLD OFFICE-1207 BROADWAY, between 11th and 12th sts., New York.
BROOKLYN-329 Fulton st. HARLEM-New Department, 150 East 125th st., advertisements a 227 East 115th st. PHILADELPHIA, PA. LEADER BUILDING, 112 SOUTH ST. WASHINGTON-TON 414TH ST.
LONDON OFFICE-25 COCKFETTER ST., TRAPALGAR SQUARE.

THE CIRCULATION OF THE EVENING WORLD ON Friday, Aug. 23,

WAS PRECISELY
348,010
COPIES.

But even on days when there is no event of extraordinary public interest THE EVENING WORLD sells a few copies. For instance, its circulation on Thursday, Aug. 22, was

170,370
COPIES.

LABOR'S HOLIDAY.

It is Labor Day. In its existence a nation pays merited tribute to the genius of toil. Labor has decked itself and, glad in its sturdy strength, is tossing its cap in air.

It is a propitious day, emblem in its brightness of Labor's hopes and future. Let no one begrudge the workman his legal holiday. It is work that has made the land what it is. It is the workman who is our chief strength and on whose broad shoulders rests the National prosperity.

If he wants to "lay off" for one day in the year and shut his burden upon the lack of the rest of the world, and stretch himself and march and eat and drink and be merry and give three cheers for himself, where is the man who would wish, or who is the man who would presume to say him nay?

While our American workman is taking his holiday London is trembling on the verge of awful labor riots. Here's to our strong-limbed but level-headed artisan.
Here's to our bone and sinew!

JUDGE BOOKSTAYERS AGAIN.

It never rains but it pours.
There was reason enough for Judge Bookstayer to remain at home when FLACK and his crowd tricked and insulted the Court of Common Pleas. The judge's honor and the dignity of the tribunal demanded his presence. He was held guilty at least of judicial carelessness, and should have vindicated himself.

But he went away and has stayed away, and the task was taken up by other Judges, less willing than he, to have that stain upon their court. Now there is a new provocation for Judge Bookstayer's presence here. The accusation made by Lawyer HENRY W. COLLIER, though judges seem loath to listen to it, should be given no moment to ferment in the public mind.

Judge Bookstayer is accused of deliberately altering the minutes of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas, so as to change the wording of a decision of Judge LANZMERE and reverse a judgment.

It looks as if Judge Bookstayer may have to devote the remainder of his judicial career to explanations of various sorts.

THAT MOUTH OF TANNER'S.

Corporal TANNER's friends are wishing his tongue had been shot away instead of his legs. He has stirred up a hornet's nest with it. The G. A. R. men are about his ears with a dread noise, and unless he can prove the scandalous statements he made at Milwaukee with regard to soldiers' widows, it is apt to go hard with him.

If he does prove them, though it will enlighten the public, he is not apt to fare much better.

Other persons besides TANNER are endangered by this wild locust of his—notably B. HARRISON, who may either have to get rid of this fellow or say a fond farewell to the soldier support, to win which he has capered so simply.

A SUGGESTION FOR GILBERT.

Rev. HUGH O. PENTECOST devotes more and more startling tricks than any other actor in the ecclesiastical arena. His latest prosequency—borrowed from the Russian writer Ivan Tolstoy—is the theory that a burglar or any other offender can be chained off from his bad business if all of his victims will be real nice to him. He says:

"If I knew a burglar was in my house at night I would go to him with a light, unarméd, and talk to him as I would to a friend whom I desired to help. If he then desired to take my goods I would make no protest, nor would I come his arrest. I would follow him to the door and invite him to call again.

That invitation wouldn't be Christian charity, HUGH. It would be a dismal effort at sarcasm, because, with such assistance as you grant of the burglar would have you so thoroughly lightened of what was worth taking that another visit would be unnecessary. Besides, he would expect you to preach to him again. May be you think that would tempt him.

The chief value of Mr. PENTECOST's idea lies in its adaptation to comic opera.

A TERRIBLE OLD WARRIOR.

Gen. SHERMAN acts like the sensible old soldier he usually is, in refusing to get mad and disgruntled over the misunderstanding about his seat in the railroad train leaving Milwaukee. It's a mistake many people make, to quarrel when there's no cause for it. Gen. SHERMAN knows there was no intention to tread on his toes so small a matter, but if there was he wouldn't heed it. He can afford to rest on his laurels as a fighter.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

Mrs. FLACK has decided to cease talking for publication about her domestic affairs. It is just as well. Public concern is now with the rascally Sheriff, his brazen disregard of law and abuse of his official position. Put him out.

TO RAISE MONEY.

The World's Fair Finance Committee to Discuss Several Plans.

The financiers who are charged with the duty of formulating a plan by which the money that is necessary for the successful competition for the World's Fair of 1893 can be raised will meet in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce to-morrow.

It is not yet known if a scheme will then be determined upon, as the members of this executive body are as silent on the subject as the Committee on Secret in its meetings and movements, and it is impossible to glean from them any hint of the probable action.

That action must be taken and that speedily, too, all unite in saying.

Andrew Carnegie says on this subject that Congress should not be asked to do anything towards raising the New York Fair and that the city has done its share by raising several millions of dollars.

New York, he says, is the only proper place for the holding of the proposed fair, though he conceded that Chicago's claim should be considered on the occasion of the next international exposition, which will follow the Columbian.

By that time the Windy City's pretensions will be worthy of consideration.

As a sponsor on one of Congress is liable to be called for next month, Mr. Carnegie points out the need for prompt action on the part of the financial managers of the enterprise.

Chicago should not be allowed to get the ear of Congress ahead of New York.

But thirty-one months remain in which to get the Exposition "on its feet," and in Mr. Carnegie's opinion not a day of all this time should be wasted.

WORLDLING.

John L. Blair, the Jersey railroad king, has a fortune that is estimated all the way from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000. He was at one time President of twenty railroads.

The golden rod is President Harrison's preference for the National flower.

Pere Hyacinth, the noted French preacher, is a tall, well-built man, with a finely-sloped head, thick-fringed with iron-gray hair. His thoughtful and somewhat melancholy face is closely shaven. His eyes are dark gray.

The late Julia Jackson Christian, Stonewall Jackson's daughter, was an interesting woman of charming and unaffected manners. Almost from her birth she was an object of tender regard in the South, and of late years she was greatly beloved by the Confederate veterans.

BOOK REVIEWS.

"A BLIND BAROON."

A story threaded on somewhat hackneyed lines, yet the characters are all the better for it. It is a book calculated to claim the interest of the reader, but will not stand a very careful analysis.

The story is marked by several noteworthy points, principally the rescue of Frank Dudley by the hero, Arthur Arlington, the former having been knocked overboard during a storm. The description of this scene may be termed a masterpiece of word painting.

There is also the stirring married woman, who entangles the hero in a plot of intrigue and romance. The heroine's fortune, the proud heroine herself, who is a bit of a plaything of a man whose she does not love, and the honest broker, who by strict economy rescues the squandered fortune.

There is also the stirring married woman, who entangles the hero in a plot of intrigue and romance. The heroine's fortune, the proud heroine herself, who is a bit of a plaything of a man whose she does not love, and the honest broker, who by strict economy rescues the squandered fortune.

"A FALSE COIN."

E. Sheridan has written a novelization of the drama, "A False Coin." Not all the scenes are local, and the story opens in the New York Club house. The author takes you by easy stages to the beach at Long Branch, the races, and back again to New York. The novel is written in a bright and cheery style.

The Indians' Love of Fire-Water.

Were intemperance permitted there it would work a awful blight. The thirst of the Indian blood for "fire-water" is proverbial. But prohibition in this Territory is a decided success, and a drunken man is almost an anomaly. The appetite of the full blood for whiskey is simply marvellous. He will resort to any means to obtain it, even to the taking of human life. His inordinate appetite is recognized by the United States Government, which even forbids the introduction of some patent medicines on account of the human life. His inordinate appetite is recognized by the United States Government, which even forbids the introduction of some patent medicines on account of the human life.

A Censure of Opinion.

The Presidents of the United States concur that THE EVENING WORLD is:

ANDREW J. BARNES
RUTH E. BARNES
JAMES K. P. O'LE
MARTIN VAN BUREN
GROVER C. CLARK
JAMES A. GARFIELD
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS
JOHN C. CALHOUN
THOMAS J. FERRIS
MILLARD FILLMORE
JAMES M. IRON
JAMES R. MONROE
GEORGE WASHINGTON
H. H. H. 673 Eighth avenue.

NO MORE NEEDED!

Enough Money Received to Pay the Free Doctor Corps.

Save Your Baby Fund Contributions Until Another Season.

A Multitude of Little Sufferers Have Been Relieved.

The Work Will Proceed Until the Exhaustion of the Fund.

An Account Covering Every Dollar Will Be Duly Rendered Our Charitable Readers.

NO MORE MONEY NEEDED.

THE EVENING WORLD desires to inform the many friends of the Sick Baby Fund that no more money is needed for the work this year.

With the funds in hand, and what is sure to come in from various fairs and entertainments already undertaken, as announced by charitable workers, there will be enough to pay all legitimate expenses.

The amount of good accomplished by our readers in this work is simply incalculable. Director Foster's official report states that up to last Friday 10,106 cases had been relieved by the corps of thirty-five physicians now in the field. Even these figures, however, but faintly indicate the actual accomplishment.

The work will proceed until the exhaustion of the funds, and THE EVENING WORLD will in due time render to its readers an account of precisely how the money has been spent.

THE CONTRIBUTIONS.

Already acknowledged..... $0,120.77
Mrs. White..... 1.00
Brooklyn Bachelor..... 3.00
E. E. Jones..... 1.00
Brooklyn Fair..... 1.00
A King's daughter..... 1.00
Grace I. Jones..... 1.00
Mrs. W. A. and B. G..... 2.00

Pennsylvania Friends.

Please send enclosed $2 for the Sick Babies' Fund. Wish it were more. Hoping the fund will reach millions, we remain, yours for the noble work,
Mrs. W. A. and B. G.,
Dunmore, Pa.

Another Brooklyn Fair.

The enclosed $5.10 is the proceeds of a fair held by our little Brooklyn girls for the benefit of THE EVENING WORLD'S Sick Baby Fund.

ETHEL BARKLEY,
ANNE BARKLEY,
THESSIE DESKY,
FLORENCE VITT.

Given by Friends.

Enclosed please find $1, collected from friends of the Sick Baby Fund.
A KING'S DAUGHTER.

They Gave a Performance.

Several little boys and girls were anxious yesterday to do something to help our Sick Babies' Fund, so they held a performance at 520 East Eighty-sixth street, and netted the enclosed sum, $1.34. Tickets of admission were sold at one, two, three and five cents. The following is a list of those who took part in the entertainment:

Eloa Levin, Greta Levin, Martha Levin, Alphonse Curado, Mamie Curado, Flora Andersson, Emma Schwab, Millie Hogen-toren, the Coleman, Lulu Stedrick.

Grace's Mite.

Please find enclosed 19 cents for the sick babies from
GRACE I. JONES.

A Dollar from Brooklyn.

Please accept $1 for the Sick Babies' Fund. Respectfully, C. E. P. Brooklyn.

He's Going to Be Married.

Enclosed please find $5, which I wish you to apply to some poor family or families which need it most. I intend getting married, so I wish them to pray for me that the Lord will not forsake me in my hour of need and trouble.

Armour & Co.'s Contribution.

We have shipped to your address, our delivery, three cases beef extract, which we know will be found particularly agreeable to THE EVENING WORLD'S sick ones. After meeting your we felt assured that these goods would be carefully distributed, and do good. If more of this extract can be used to advantage kindly inform us, and we will aim to fill your order. Very truly yours,
ARMOUR & CO., W. G. HILL,
New York office, 182 Duane street.

The Death Rate.

There were ninety-three deaths yesterday, and forty-nine of them were children under five years of age. The causes of death were:

Cholera infantum..... 2
Dysentery..... 2
Marasmus..... 9
Diphtheria..... 4
Pneumonia..... 4
Other diseases..... 1

Baseball To-Day.

Pittsburg at New York, A. M. and P. M.
Cincinnati at Boston, A. M. and P. M.
Chicago at Philadelphia.
Cleveland at Washington.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

Cincinnati at Brooklyn, A. M. and P. M.
Louisville at Baltimore.
Kansas City at Philadelphia.

ATLANTIC ASSOCIATION.

Newark at Newark, A. M. and P. M.
Lowell at Worcester.
Hartford at New Haven.

To be played at Oakland Park, Jersey City.

THEIR DISGRACE ATONED FOR.

Regular Celebrations in the Lives of Thomas H. Benton and James W. Reid.

(From the Florida Times-Union.)

Many years ago one of the most brilliant young North Carolinians of that time was detected in a small theft at the State University. Temporarily overcome with mortification, he packed up bag and baggage and became a voluntary exile to what was then the distant West. He refused to accept, as ultimate, Burns's conclusion that "one and one makes a name for aye." He was young enough, and brave enough, and having enough to recognize the truth that a single moral delinquency, like a menial or physical defect, may, in time, be overcome by a persistent perseverance in well-doing.

Human nature, after all, is really more generous than it gets credit for. The world accepted the young man's pledge when he showed "fruits most for repentance." He bent all his energies to recover the ground lost in the hour of temptation, and succeeded. He was finally elected from his new home to a seat in the United States Senate, where he ranked with Clay, Calhoun and Webster, shedding lasting honors on his name and country.

Not eight years ago another young North Carolinian, conspicuous for talents and energy, was elected to Congress from the old North State. He once took high rank in the councils of his party; but, overcome in an evil hour by the allurements of the National capital, he too yielded to the temptation and committed the charge of having secured the passage of a bill which would have moved him to resign, he also, became a voluntary exile to the West—and now the chances are that he will be elected a United States Senator from Idaho, in whose recent Constitutional Convention he made a high record as a leader.

The first example allude referred to was Mr. Thomas H. Benton of Missouri, whose "Thirty Years in the United States Senate" is a politico-historical treatise. The latter is that of Mr. James W. Reid. For several years he has been laid away out of sight, and it is gratifying to know that he has restored himself to public confidence and to the service of the country. The conclusion is reached by young men who make a single misstep is that they give up the struggle entirely. "Never say die," should be the motto of the truly brave. It is a singular coincidence that both these examples should have come from the old North State—a commonwealth renowned for sturdiness and integrity. May the fate of young Reid be no less noble than was that of his illustrious predecessor—Thomas Hart Benton.

A RUNAWAY TRAIN.

Charging Down the Allegheny Mountains at a Frenzied Rate of Speed.

(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"I had an experience last Friday night that has almost turned me against railroading, and convinced me that I can be scared—something I didn't believe before." A passenger brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad was talking and a Post reporter inquired: "What were you doing, then?" He went on: "and had just passed the Gallitzin tunnel, when I became aware that the train was whizzing down the mountainside at an unusually rapid gait. The grade for six or seven miles below the tunnel is about ninety feet to the mile, and some of the sharpest curves are at a downward angle of one hundred feet deep. The cars were jumping about, and we seemed to be flying in mid-air. The most careful conductor on the road managed the engine, and I knew something must be wrong. Then it flashed through my mind that the air brakes had played out. I rushed through the train and began putting on the hand brakes. I finally reached the rear platform and turned the brake wheel there. But the old train was fairly bumping and jumping, and I could not get the hand brake to do any good. The engine reversed, the brakes were on as tight as the hand brake in mid-air, but then we were simply sliding down the mountain. What a terrible oblong ride it was!"

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels. Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels.

Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels.

Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels.

Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels.

Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

How Mrs. Mackay Looks.

(New York Letter to Washington Post.)

One thing the women will like to know about her is what she looks like. She is a pretty woman of plump, comfortable, good-natured, well-cared-for type, with a double chin and a short, well-rounded figure. Her skin is soft and smooth and very white, with just a little touch of pink in the cheeks, and her hands are small and dainty and sparkle with jewels.

Her hair is a lovely blue-black and she wears it combed high in a sort of a twist on top of her head, and in little rings across her forehead.

Her eyes are a clear blue, but the lashes and brows are black and thick, and pupils so large that at first glance you think her eyes are black. Her manner is very pleasant and simple. When the Mackay boys go into business in this country, as their father intends they will, it is very likely Mrs. Mackay will spend all the year on this side.

If she does, she will, no doubt, make Washington her headquarters. From what she has heard of it she thinks she will like the society there, and if she does go there she will certainly break Mrs. Astor's record as the lady who has the most friends in the city.

ANAGRAMMATIC HITS

Buried Letters Which Say Pleasant Things for the Giants.

Only One Crank Here of Pessimistic Mind.

One Prophecy Which the Brooklyn Appear to Be Verifying.

By the New Yorks, of Course.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

This is what the people will say after Oct. 5:

MURPHY
KEEFE
EWINSON
TIERMAN
CRANE
COLEMAN
HARTFIELD
WELCH
LYONS
HUGHES
WADSWORTH
MURPHY
KEEFE
EWINSON
TIERMAN
CRANE
COLEMAN
HARTFIELD
WELCH
LYONS
HUGHES
WADSWORTH

It often looks so.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

How is this?

KEEFE
EWINSON
TIERMAN
CRANE
COLEMAN
HARTFIELD
WELCH
LYONS
HUGHES
WADSWORTH
MURPHY
KEEFE
EWINSON
TIERMAN
CRANE
COLEMAN
HARTFIELD
WELCH
LYONS
HUGHES
WADSWORTH

A Wall Street View of It.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

There may be one or two

KEEFE
EWINSON
TIERMAN
CRANE
COLEMAN
HARTFIELD
WELCH
LYONS